

Unknown and undiscovered security threats remain a growing source of concern and potential financial loss for utility providers. Beyond viruses, and network vulnerability your organization may be the target of journalists, disgruntled employees, labour disputes, anti-globalisation groups and radical environmentalists eager to exploit your weaknesses. As well your management needs to be prepared for potential threats from sabotage, plant openings and closings, the chain reaction from a cascading grid failure and Bill C-45 with its new criminal responsibility. Unfortunately, most utility providers are faced with under staffed security groups and do not have advance warning systems and measures to prevent these types of alternative attacks and threats, but can only respond after the fact.

Specialising on protecting critical infrastructures, the Northgate Group intelligence services for utility providers is designed to deliver timely cost effective solutions to help you prevent, mitigate and remediate these security threats before they can impact your business environments.

Building taller fences and adding more locks doesn't always mean improved security

Northgate is the premier corporate security and intelligence consulting company with fortune 500 companies around the world and some the largest utility providers in North America. We are the only security intelligence company that has the ability and experience to provide you with a complete end to end threat to and threat from risk assessment. If there is a threat or the presence of risk factors in your organization, your Northgate consultant will explain why and how to counter it.

From years of conducting event driven security and intelligence operations around the world for governments and corporate clients we have identified intelligence methods and developed processes that focus on your needs and the uniqueness of your organization. At Northgate we have the ability to:

- Conduct detailed security and intelligence assessments
- Define and offer security alternatives
- Develop and deploy corporate security programs
- Conduct training and awareness programs
- Analyse, define and manage the installation and implementation of new security infrastructure

Benefit your bottom line with a proactive approach

You can either wait for next crisis to occur where you struggle to keep your organization's production from falling below normal operation, loose faith with your stockholders, or even worse have a catastrophic failure. Your other choice is to take a proactive approach and be prepared for the inevitable. By being proactive, our clients have come to realize that Northgate services are an investment in their bottom line and in the future viability of their company. By using Northgate, you will have the tools necessary to mitigate the duration, severity and magnitude of a potential crisis. Your organization will see direct and immediate benefits by maintaining or returning to normal production levels faster as well as protecting your corporate goodwill with the public, media and your stockholders.
